Introduction

Business development has become a central function in modern executive offices, connecting organizational vision with practical growth opportunities. Executive leaders are now expected not only to manage day-to-day operations but also to identify, pursue, and sustain long-term business opportunities. This five-day training program, delivered by Gentex Training Center, is carefully designed to provide participants with comprehensive skills and strategies to strengthen business development capabilities within executive offices.

The program combines conceptual knowledge with real-world applications, covering strategic planning, stakeholder engagement, opportunity identification, and negotiation techniques. By exploring both internal and external dimensions of business growth, participants will learn how to align executive office functions with wider organizational objectives, while building stronger business networks and ensuring measurable impact.
