Introduction

The food and FMCG sector operates in a highly competitive, fast-moving environment where sales effectiveness, negotiation strength, and customer relationship management directly influence market share and profitability. Professionals working in this sector must balance volume targets, pricing pressures, distributor relationships, and evolving consumer expectations, while maintaining long-term partnerships across retail, wholesale, and modern trade channels.

This course is designed to strengthen the practical sales and negotiation capabilities required in food and FMCG markets. It focuses on structured selling approaches, value-based negotiation, and disciplined customer relationship management aligned with real commercial realities. Participants will gain a clear understanding of how buying behaviors, trade dynamics, and category competition shape sales decisions. In addition, the course emphasizes ethical selling, trust-based negotiations, and customer retention strategies that support sustainable revenue growth.

Delivered by Gentex Training Center, this program combines proven sales frameworks with applied FMCG case scenarios, enabling participants to improve performance while strengthening professional credibility with customers and partners.
